

Grenada Citizenship by Investment FAMILY APPLICATIONS

APPLYING WITH YOUR FAMILY

Taking care of one's family is important and Grenada's Citizenship by Investment Programme (CIP) allows investors to do just that. Unlike other investor migration programmes, Grenada's CIP allows applicants to include multiple dependants - including childless, single siblings, 18 years and older, and parents/grandparents of any age, on a single family application. Further, the programme does not require children of the applicant to be enrolled in a full-time institution - just that they be dependant and below the age of 30. These allowances makes it easier for larger families to receive the gift of lifetime Grenadian citizenship.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What relatives can be included as dependants on family applications?

Grenada's Citizenship by investment Programme allows for five types of relatives to be included as dependants on family applications. These include the spouse; children under age 30, parent(s)/grandparent(s) of any age, and biological or adopted sibling(s) 18 years or older of both the main applicant and his/her spouse.

If the main applicant on a citizenship application is in a polygamous marriage with several wives, can he apply for Grenadian citizenship and include all of his wives on his application?

Grenada does not recognise polygamous marriages, and as such, applicants with multiple wives must select one wife to include as the spouse on the application.

If an applicant for Grenada citizenship excludes his/her spouse from the citizenship application, will that spouse be required to submit supporting documents and be subject to due diligence checks?

A spouse, who is not included in a citizenship application will be subject to due diligence checks and will be required to submit Form One and Form Two, the letter of authorisation, police records for every country lived in for one year or more in the past ten years, certified coloured copies of current and expired passports, certified copy of a photo ID, and a certified copy of his/her birth certificate.

What is the age requirement for children to be included on a citizenship application?

Children on family applications must be less than 30 years old.

Will a child, who is nearing his/her thirtieth birthday or who will turn thirty during the processing of the citizenship application qualify for inclusion on his/her parent's application?

As long as a child is 29 at the time the citizenship application is submitted to the Citizenship by Investment Unit, he/she will still be processed for citizenship.

Can a married child of an applicant, who meets the age requirement, qualify as a dependant on the applicant's citizenship application?

A married child cannot be included on his/her parent's citizenship application.

Can children of the applicant, who have children of their own, qualify as dependants on the applicant's citizenship application?

Children included on their parent's citizenship applications, must be single/unmarried, without children, and below the age of 30.

Must children be enrolled in school to qualify as dependants on a citizenship application?

Children are no longer required to be enrolled in school to qualify for inclusion on their parent's citizenship application.

Can an employed child be considered a dependant on an application?

Children, who are gainfully employed, cannot be included as dependants on their parent's citizenship application. Exceptions are made for children, who work as interns.

Can a child be added to a citizenship application after approval has been granted to the applicant?

New born babies of the main applicant, born within 12 months of the grant of citizenship, are the only children that can be retroactively added to a citizenship application.

What are the requirements for retroactively adding a new born baby to a citizenship application?

To add a baby born within one year of the grant of citizenship, the main applicant must submit the following documents to the Citizenship by Investment Unit no later than six months after the child's birth:

- Form one
- Form three
- Certified copy of the birth certificate
- Certified colour copies of the baby's passport (if applicable)
- Passport application form
- Eight passport photos (two of which must be certified)

Cost for Adding a New Born

- Administration Fee: $100
- Application Fee: $5,000

If the baby becomes the fifth person on the application, $25,000 is also charged.

Can children from multiple marriages be included by the main applicant on his/her application?

Yes. Children of the main applicant and his/her spouse, who come from previous relationships or marriages can be included on family applications. However, whenever a child from a previous marriage is under age 18, an affidavit of consent from the ex-spouse, as well as a notarised copy of a photo ID from the ex-spouse is required for the child to be processed for citizenship.

Does a parent with full custody of his/her child require approval from the ex-spouse to apply for Grenadian citizenship for the child?

A parent, who has full custody of his/her child does not need to obtain an affidavit of consent from his/her ex-spouse.

Is due diligence performed on dependent children?

Due diligence is performed on any dependant child, who is 17 years or older.

What is the age requirement for parents/grandparents to be included on family applications?

In Grenada parents/grandparents of any age can be included on family applications.

Can the parents/grandparents of the main applicant's spouse be included in the application?

Yes. The parents/grandparents of the main applicant's spouse can be included in the application.

Must dependant parents/grandparents live with the main applicant?

It is not necessary for parents/grandparents to reside with the main applicant.

Can a parent/grandparent sponsor the application of his/her child?

A parent/grandparent is allowed to sponsor the application of his/her child.

Can a parent/grandparent be included as a dependant on an application where he/she is also the benefactor for the main applicant?

A parent/grandparent cannot be included as a dependant on an application where he/she is also the benefactor.

What criteria must a sibling meet to qualify as a dependant on a citizenship application?

Siblings may be included on citizenship applications if they are 18 years or older, unmarried, and without children.

Do siblings of the main applicant's spouse qualify for inclusion on the citizenship application?

Siblings of the main applicant's spouse, who are 18 years or older, unmarried, and without children can also be included on the citizenship application.

Are adopted siblings eligible for inclusion on citizenship applications?

Adopted siblings of both the main applicant and his/her spouse who are 18 years or older, unmarried, and without children can be included on the citizenship application.

Will the absence of necessary documents for any dependant on a citizenship application delay the processing of the application, even if all the required documents for the main applicant are submitted?

The processing of the main applicant's citizenship will be delayed if all of the documents required for his/her dependants have not been submitted with the citizenship application or are no longer valid.
